from the governor

May 10, 2018

Greetings:

On behalf of the State of Colorado, we welcome you to the seventh annual Colorado Creative Industries Summit in the Greeley Creative District.

Colorado is recognized as a national leader in building sustainable communities and economies by cultivating creative talent, leveraging local resources, and fostering a sense of place through the arts and innovation. It is our innovative spirit at the heart of these movements that continues to drive us forward.

Colorado’s creative industries have a significant impact on the strength of our economy and continue to play an integral role in our state’s vitality. In fact, Coloradans participate in the arts more than almost any other state in the country. Whether it is a community on the Front Range or in a small rural or mountain town, the creative sector touches all four corners of our state, contributing to the very inner workings of what makes us unique.

During your time at the Summit, we hope you will take a moment to celebrate the exceptional amount of variety, skill, and determination inherent within the Colorado creative community. As Coloradans, we all have the good fortune of benefitting from the diverse projects and goods generated by our creative industries.

Thank you for participating in the 2018 Summit and for your ongoing support and dedication as we ensure Colorado’s status as a premier creative center.

Sincerely,

John W. Hickenlooper
Governor

Creativity Connects: Forging Collaborative, Mutually-Beneficial Partnerships between the Arts and Other Sectors

Room: Cache La Poudre - Doubletree Hotel

A recent Creativity Connects leadership initiative at the National Endowment for the Arts helped show how the arts can contribute to the nation’s creative ecosystem, and explored how the arts can connect with other sectors. Attend this session to hear what has been learned through this work that, among other things, invested in more than 70 collaborative projects across the country aimed at tackling some of the most difficult challenges in their communities. You will come away with new ideas and strategies for utilizing artistic practice to support the creative needs of non-arts sectors as well as the arts.

Ann Meier Baker is the director of Music & Opera at the National Endowment for the Arts, where she also oversees the NEA’s Creativity Connects grant program, and directs the NEA Jazz Masters Fellowship Initiative. Previously, Baker served as president and CEO of Chorus America. She has also held leadership positions at the League of American Orchestras and the National Association for Music Education, and she began her career as a professional singer with the U.S. Air Force Singing Sergeants.

The Future of Me: Four-steps to Business Success for Creatives

Room: UNC Bears Room - Doubletree Hotel

Help artists and creatives in your community reduce fear and ambiguity about business and replace it with excitement and clarity for building and growing their creative enterprises! While there are countless resources filled with MBA-speak and hours of busy work, this hands-on workshop will walk creatives through a simple, four-step process for their business future. Attendees will leave the workshop with an action plan. Facilitated by two creatives who are also successful, serial entrepreneurs and founders of The Creativity Lab, this session is designed to help creatives identify and answer the questions that will map out their pathway to business success.

Kevin Kazuhiro Yoshida is an entrepreneur, visualist and architect who has earned a reputation as a strategically insightful designer guided equally by “ethics and aesthetics.” Yoshida is a founder the Creativity Lab of Colorado, a 501(c)(3) non-profit, that advocates for creativity as a foundation for empowerment and started Ideate Design to pursue the development of community revitalization and urban design projects.
Engaging with Underrepresented Voices, Stories and Experiences through the Arts

Room: Hensel Phelps Theater - Union Colony Civic Center

This performance and panel explores how communities might engage with underrepresented voices, stories and experiences through the arts. Participants will explore this topic through the example of the Made in Boulder Festival at the Dairy Arts Center, a new yearly event launched in January 2018. Tamara Meneghini, co-producer and CU Boulder Theatre and Dance Professor, Adam Russell Johnson (Accsuckability and Phamaly Theater Co.), Ayla Sullivan (Trans/Action), and Kirsten Wilson (founder Motus theater) will share performance and workshop excerpts and lead a discussion of how you might involve your community in conversation around issues shared in their work. Part of the collaborative Equity and Diversity Professional Development Series, this panel is sponsored by the Office for Outreach and Engagement, University of Colorado at Boulder and Boulder County Arts Alliance.

William Marino is a founder of The Creativity Lab and a champion for 40 West Arts District. Prior, Marino built and sold three companies in the publishing/technology sectors, served as a planning commissioner and chaired task forces on economic development and community planning. A published author and frequent speaker on entrepreneurship, business strategies, and community engagement, Marino sits on the boards of 40 West Arts, Metro West Housing, and a number of start-up companies.

Tamara Meneghini is a professional actor, voice/movement coach, and teaching artist. She holds an MFA/Acting, a BA in Theatre/Music Performance, and is a certified in the Fitzmaurice Voicework and Williamson Movement Technique.

Recent CU Boulder Theatre and Dance alum Adam Russell Johnson aims to inform, educate and entertain. He will instigate conversation around disability in our community and un-mute the 20% of the population that has been silenced—to start talking about disability. Adam views life with a unique lens and with unique legs. Come join him as he reflects on his life in Boulder, Colorado.

Ayla Sullivan is an undergrad student studying Theatre and Business, and is the Communications Coordinator for the Gender & Sexuality Center. They are particularly interested in making more inclusive, intersectional spaces within the community, as well as performative art, and are primarily focused on social justice issues regarding the rights of queer people of color.
Kirsten Wilson is the founder and artistic director of Motus Theater, an organization that uses original theater to support community conversation on critical issues. Wilson created award-winning pieces such as: “Rocks Karma Arrows,” a multimedia performance exploring Boulder history through the lens of race and class; “Do You Know Who I Am?,” in collaboration with young undocumented immigrant leaders to help them perform their own stories.

deTour - Statewide Music Touring With a Mission

Room: Room 101 - Recreation Center

In 2018 deTour will continue exploring non-traditional models in touring in the state of Colorado partnering with a diverse lineup of acts including elephant revival, wheelchair sports camp, 2mx2 and Fullmetal. Artists will tackle initiatives that effect citizens across the state including youth music education, natural space preservation and the rehabilitation of our offenders in state correctional facilities. Come learn more about our program and learn how your community can be involved!

The first year of Kyle James Hauser’s music career began auspiciously: he performed at CMJ, SXSW and the Toronto Int’l Film festivals; was a competitive finalist at Telluride Bluegrass and Rocky Mountain Folk festivals; and released his first record “Oh Oh” on sonaBLAST! Records.

Kat Rich received her Master’s in Art’s Development and Program Management from the University of Denver and joined Carbondale Arts as Program Director for The Rosybelle Mobile Makerspace Bus. Kat has worked as Volunteer and Events Coordinator for KDNK Community Access Radio, and as an elementary school teacher, specializing in science for K, 1, 2, and curriculum development for lower school programs.

With an eclectic track selection and turntablist ability, Fullmetal has built a reputation as a “DJ’s DJ in Northern Colorado.” Since picking up a pair of turntables in 2012, Fullmetal has competed in the DMC DJ Championships, opened for nationally-touring acts coming through Colorado, played at SXSW, and has taught scratching and turntablism with the Detour and Take Note Colorado.

Lolita Mendoza Castañeda is an artist, activist, and advocate for the arts. She cultivates her creative skills in marketing, creative media, entertainment, communication, as well as research & development to facilitate and encourage people organizations & companies who have a humanitarian objective.
Space to Create - at work in rural Colorado

Room: South Platte - Doubletree Hotel

The session will explore how the state-led Space to Create Colorado program is working as a collaboration between public and private agencies to identify and create affordable, mixed-use creative sector development projects in rural and mountain-town Colorado communities.

Shannon Joern has been on the development team at Artspace since 2004. She has helped raise more than $35 million in philanthropic and private sector funds for the organization’s general operations and its affordable mixed-use arts facilities in communities across the country.

Diedra Silbert, Community Initiatives Facilitator for the Town of Ridgway, loves bringing people together to strengthen community. For the past 5 years, she has spearheaded the Ridgway Creative District and Main Street initiatives toward downtown revitalization. She also serves on the Colorado Main Street Advisory Board.

Chantal Unfug became the Department of Local Affairs’ Director of the Division of Local Government (DLG) in 2013 where she leads over 65 employees to provide research, technical assistance, problem solving and expertise focused on livability, sustainability, and resilience of Colorado’s communities. Under Chantal’s leadership, DLG integrates community, economic and workforce development impact strategies.
Stephen Goldsmith is an artist who started a community development corporation developing safe, affordable living and workspaces where people could take risks in Salt Lake City. As an artist, he has collaborated on large-scale environmental waterworks including daylighting buried creeks and transforming them into parks. His installations in the city’s public spaces include The Temporary Museum of Permanent Change and his work on the Katrina Furniture Project have been platforms for community participation. As Director of the Center for the Living City, he oversees projects including the Observe! program which engages young women and girls around the world in finding ways to amplify their voices and nurture creative responses to problems they face in the places they love.

Appointed Planning Director for Salt Lake City in 2000, he was the first artist/planning director in the U.S., where he produced an international symposium on vision and ethics in city building during the 2002 Olympics. He now runs the undergraduate degree program in urban ecology in the Department of Architecture + Planning at the University of Utah.

Two shuttle busses will deliver participants to the starting point about 8 blocks from the Conference location. Reserved bus spaces are limited to the first 40 participants. Please sign up at the registration desk.
1:30-3PM CONCURRENT SESSIONS AND TOURS

State of Change: The Change Leader program at work and how you can be part of the Statewide Network

Room: Hensel Phelps Theater - Union Colony Civic Center

Join us to learn about CCI’s Change Leader Program and Statewide Network of Leaders using creativity to change their communities for the better. We’ll feature a taste of the program, a presentation by Andrew Schneider, a Change Leader from Fort Collins about how the program has helped in his work, and a chance for you to ask your questions and apply to be part of the network.

Pamela Denahy serves as the Director of Tourism and Events for the City of La Junta, a rural town in the Southeast region of Colorado. As the Director, Denahy’s goal is to creatively leverage, highlight and emphasize La Junta and all the City has to offer. In addition, Denahy works to help leverage existing events while promoting new events that will enhance the experiences of both citizens of and visitors to La Junta and the surrounding region.

Charles Leslie became the Director of the Community Concert Hall at Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colorado, in August, 2008. From 1999 to 2008 he served as the Assistant Director, Associate Director and Interim Director at the University of Texas Performing Arts Center in Austin, Texas. Prior to the University of Texas, Charles worked in the Evansville, Indiana office of the facility management company, Ogden Entertainment.

Tanya Mote has been with Su Teatro since 1997. She received her BA in Mass Communications and Spanish from the University of Denver in 1989 and holds an MA (1991) and a Ph.D (2009) in International Studies from the Josef Korbel School of International Studies, University of Denver.

Andrew Schneider founded and leads Create Places, an economic and workforce development nonprofit that provides support to increase creative and arts-related employment in Northern Colorado. He also serves as the managing director of The Downtown Artery, a creative hub that caters to the revival of the working artist.
Memory Placemaking: Using Collective Memory to Reclaim Community

Room: Room 101 - Recreation Center
The Museum of Memory’s Neighborhood Memory Project is a program of El Pueblo History Museum, a community museum of History Colorado. We work directly with neighborhoods in our community that have been erased, neglected or are under threat, and we help these residents reclaim their history and site-based memory as a tool of resistance. DiPrince and Ortega will share how they use memory and art to foster resilience in communities.

Dawn DiPrince is the Chief Community Museum Officer for History Colorado, leading transformation of eight museums/historic sites across the state. Her work in public engagement has been recognized as a national model for engaged humanities by the National Humanities Alliance. DiPrince was selected in 2014 as a Creative Community Fellow for National Arts Strategies.

Jose Ortega is the Exhibits and Collections Coordinator for the Community Museums of History Colorado. Ortega leads exhibit development, exhibit project coordination, exhibit maintenance, and collections needs throughout the community museum statewide network. He has experience working in the collections of the Chicano Archives at Colorado State University-Pueblo and Special Collections at Pueblo City-County Library District.

Hip Hop to Improvise a Better Community

Room: Cache La Poudre - Doubletree Hotel
Join Armando in this exploration of body movement. Armando uses hip hop-based moves to set a foundation of confidence within oneself. Dance is a part of everyone’s life, whether you are attending your first school dance, quinceañera, wedding, bar mitzvah, dance battle, or maybe just two stepping with grandma in the living room. This is an opportunity to participate and use the body as the ultimate resource. The hip hop dance culture is about improvising and making the most with what you have, to add a twist and make something your own. This workshop will break you down and build you back up funky, fresh, dressed to impress and ready to party.

Armando Silva was born in Sombrerete, Zacatecas, Mexico. His family moved to the Northern Colorado area in search of the American Dream when he was just five. He started dancing at the age of three, joining his dad’s DANZA group. He began teaching dance at the age of 14 and continued teaching through dance studios post high school. He most recently started teaching Hip Hop at the University of Northern Colorado.
From DIY to Do It Together: Libraries as Creative Community Spaces & Partners

Room: South Platte - Doubletree Hotel

From booking death metal bands, to doing 3D printing, to hosting slam poets, learn how libraries are supporting creative endeavors and businesses. Musicians, artists, and many other creatives have found space for their work at public libraries. Denver Public Library, Pikes Peak Library District, and High Plains Library District will share their arts-based programming, entrepreneurship opportunities, residencies, and much more, and include you in the discussion of libraries’ roles in the arts.

Ginger Conly is a Librarian at the Ross-Cherry Creek Branch of Denver Public Library, where she is responsible for children’s and live music programming. Her background is in music and studio arts and she has worked in public and special libraries in Colorado, Virginia, and Washington DC. Currently she is working on expanding library music programming in public libraries.

Jennifer Dewey is an Adult Programming Librarian at Denver Public Library. She provides support to programming staff at 26 library locations, and coordinates a large database of performers and presenters. She has worked in libraries for over 10 years, and comes from a fine arts/punk rock background.

Nate Stone is the Program Administrator for the ideaLABs, free community makerspaces located in four of Denver Public Library’s 26 branches. He ended up in libraryland after collecting a series of odd skills through punk rock, zines, community organizing, and youth development work.

Micaela Sanchez is a sociologist by heart and librarian by trade. She has worked in the library profession for 15 years. As Program Coordinator for the High Plains Library District and member of the Greeley Creative District Board, she constantly looks for ways to empower individuals and create social change through creative library programming.

John Spears is Chief Librarian & CEO of the Pikes Peak Library District. He has nearly 20 years of experience working in urban, suburban, and rural libraries. He believes that libraries act as a catalyst in the artistic, cultural, economic, and civic development of their communities, and that the strength of a library resides in the staff and the connections they form with those they serve.
Sibyl Gardner has worked in television for more than three decades, starting in New York as a production assistant at MTV, then field producer and studio producer on various cable TV shows. After relocating to L.A. to pursue screenwriting, her career took off at “Law & Order,” spanned numerous one-hour dramas, most recently writing and producing for “Nashville.”

Patrick Hackett is an award-winning Producer with films screening at the TriBeCa Film Festival, AFI Film Festival, the International Film Festival of Rotterdam, and many others. He has produced both narrative films as well as documentaries and is also the President of the Board of the Colorado Innovators of New Media & Arts (CINEMA).

With an infectious laugh and thoughtful smile, Jeff Litchford leads his teams to put the fun first while getting the job done. He is an architect of games reaching millions of players using his own unique brand of creativity and humor. With a background in art, design, leadership, business development and studio strategy he is helping Deck Nine Games grow into a creative powerhouse.

Andrew Schneider founded and leads Create Places, an economic and workforce development nonprofit that provides support to increase creative and arts-related employment in Northern Colorado. He also serves as the managing director of The Downtown Artery, a creative hub that caters to the revival of the working artist.

Burke Hilsabeck is Assistant Professor of English and Film Studies at the University of Northern Colorado. He has taught at the University of Chicago, the University of Michigan, and Oberlin College. His book, Witless Genius: Hollywood, Slapstick, and the Comedy of Self-Refernece, is forthcoming from SUNY Press.

Donald Zuckerman currently serves as Colorado Film Commissioner, appointed by Governor John Hickenlooper in 2011. Zuckerman is a member of the Producers Guild of America and has been producer or executive producer of 17 feature length narrative motion pictures, 2 feature length documentaries, and one documentary series.

Engaging Community – A Sampler of Multi-Cultural and Youth Initiative Programs

Room: Hensel Phelps Theater - Union Colony Civic Center

Who are we? What’s important to us? How do our values translate into our stories, arts, foods, performances, dress, and language? Including everyone assures a vibrant, inclusive, and rich environment for the whole community. A panel from the Greeley and Carbondale Creative Districts will share their success stories and offer you a toolkit of ideas to take home to engage your creative community at a new level.

Amy Kimberly is Executive Director of Carbondale Arts, which oversees the Carbondale Creative District. She co-owned and operated Fly Me to the Moon in Telluride from 1984 - 2001 and created Telluride Nightgrass, the late night shows of Telluride Bluegrass Festival. She is passionate about community, creativity and smart growth.

Samuel Bernal is VP for Entravision Communications Corporation. He was born in Mexico City. He loves storytelling and that’s why he became a journalist. He is passionate about radio, newspapers, movies, social media and every way of communication. He was awarded by Garfield County with a Humanitarian Services Award.
Denise Newberry is a Dreamer, Designer, Letterpress Printer and Proprietress of CabinPress Studio, a small bespoke letterpress studio. After a 30 year career working as a teacher and in natural resource management for the National Park Service & the Colorado Division of Wildlife, Denise had a chance to follow her heart, and began restoring vintage printing presses.

Amy Ortiz has worked with the High Plains Library District for 12 years. She works with the Greeley community through various programs- Music and Movement, Music and Movement with Adults with Disabilities, Zumba Kids/Fit Kids, Summer Reading Adventure, and Hip Hop Madness.

“Let’s Get Inky”!! :: Follow the Trail to Linoleum Block Carving & Printing ::

Room: UNC Bears Room - Doubletree Hotel

If you’ve always wondered about the classic art of printmaking, this is the workshop for you! Printmaker Denise Newberry will introduce you to this engaging art form. You’ll learn how to create and use a linoleum block print. We’ll explore the different equipment you can use to make your prints, from wooden spoons to hand presses. Whether you are a beginner or someone who has dabbled in printmaking before and wants a refresher, come let your creative juices flow and print away. At this workshop you will create a design, carve the design into a linoleum block with the proper tools, and then print the image onto paper. At the end, participants will take home a bookmark, and the experience and confidence to continue to grow as a printmaker. This session is limited to the first 20 attendees.

Denise Newberry is a Dreamer, Designer, Letterpress Printer and Proprietress of CabinPress Studio, a small bespoke letterpress studio. After a 30 year career working as a teacher and in natural resource management for the National Park Service & the Colorado Division of Wildlife, Denise had a chance to follow her heart, and began restoring vintage printing presses.

Creative Forces: Making a Connection between Arts and Military

Room: Room 101 - Recreation Center

Creative Forces: NEA Military Healing Arts Network is a partnership between the National Endowment for the Arts and the Department of Defense that leverages the power of the arts to serve military patients and veterans who have been diagnosed with traumatic brain injury and psychological health conditions, as well as their families and caregivers. In the spring of 2017, the NEA announced the expansion of the Creative Forces program to include Fort Carson in Colorado Springs. Learn how the Cultural Office of the Pikes Peak Region, in cooperation with CCI, is leading a local Creative Forces initiative that is building new and meaningful cross-sector connections.
Andy Vick is an experienced leader and arts administrator who believes in the power of the creative sector to drive economic development, build community, grow tourism, and enhance quality of life for everyone. As the Executive Director of the Cultural Office of the Pikes Peak Region, Andy oversees the daily operation and management of a non-profit, local arts agency serving a two-county region with a population of almost 700,000.

Amy Dunlap is a Board-Certified Music Therapist with Creative Forces: NEA Military Healing Arts Network, and practices at the Warrior Recovery Center on Fort Carson. Ms. Dunlap holds a Master of Music in Music Therapy from Ohio University. Ms. Dunlap has diverse clinical experience and is skilled in using music therapy to facilitate physical, psychoemotional, and spiritual growth.

Cory Sandoval is a retired Staff Sergeant with the United States Air Force. He spent six and a half years in service, retiring as a Battlefield Weather Forecaster while stationed at Ft. Carson. In 2014, Cory was in a severe auto accident that left him with a TBI, PTSD and other physical challenges. Music therapy helped him to cope during his recovery.

Jay Salinas is an artist, farmer and educator. In 1995, together with his partner Donna Neuwirth, they started, a CSA based in Wisconsin. In 2000 they formed the Wormfarm Institute, an award-winning nonprofit whose mission is to integrate culture and agriculture. Wormfarm creates community cultural events like the nationally recognized Fermentation Fest & Farm/Art DTour. Wormfarm also works to build regional networks through the Rural-Urban Flow initiative and hosts an artist residency on a working farm.

Jay has worked to support the development of sustainable agriculture in urban and rural communities across the nation working with both Growing Power in Milwaukee and the Farley Center Gaining Ground project in Madison.

Trained as a sculptor, Jay has developed and implemented innovative and successful art curricula for both at-risk youth and at the university level. He has also taught sustainable farming techniques to farmers across the nation and continues to work with growers with diverse backgrounds and abilities to build sustainable food systems. Born in and raised near Chicago, Jay holds a BFA & MFA in Sculpture.

Community Building via Creative and Unique Special Events

Room: UNC Bears Room - Doubletree Hotel

As our culture becomes more and more dominated by perpetual change and the digital world’s influence, the need for exciting and “special” events grows exponentially. The challenge of getting the attention of desired audiences - be they locals or tourists - requires a team of creative thinkers and doers. The value of working and collaborating with your community, be it large or small, has become a vital aspect of achieving success. So called “special events” rarely are these days. It can be difficult for organizations to keep up their momentum. They are often compelled to seek out new ways to engage their desired targets and still fulfill their mission. Groups often fall into the trap of trying to recapture the successes of past events and/or by “copying” noteworthy events in other communities. One problem with that approach is that it does not take into account the realities of their current community. This program will serve to demonstrate how individuals, groups and communities can work together on inventing and implementing events that will work toward common goals. Attendees will be guided through a hands-on set of activities, challenges and assignments. This “idea-storming” session will present tools, steps and techniques for future use back in their own communities.

Rodney Wood is an internationally known artist with an extensive art resume including a long list of exhibitions, media coverage, publication and gallery representation. He is also an award winning arts advocate, educator, event planner, community builder and creativity consultant. Rodney is the founder and Executive Director of the art car festival ArtoCade.

Innovations in Art + Law + Technology

Room: South Platte - Doubletree Hotel

We’ve entered a bold new world of technology and those advances clearly have an impact on creative production, distribution and intellectual property. This panel conversation will explore those issues, what to look out for and how you might be able to protect your creative work.

Meredith Badler is the program director at CBCA. She facilitates connections between arts and business statewide through CBCA’s various initiatives and events, such as Colorado Attorneys for the Arts and the Business for the Arts Awards.

Following a career in the music and entertainment management businesses as a tour manager, publicist, band manager and founder of his own management agency, Dave Ratner now specializes in entertainment, intellectual property, and business law.
Justin Konrad joined Hutchinson Black and Cook, LLC in 2007 and became a Member of the firm in 2012. As a professional musician and recording engineer, Justin has an interest in entertainment law and represents musicians, filmmakers, writers and others in the entertainment industries.

Laura Hyunjhee Kim is a Korean-American multimedia artist who playfully engages with the DIY aesthetics of the internet and renders familiar physical experiences into fabricated (non)existent spaces that reimagine digital culture and virtual living.

Aside from touring as a solo act under the VibeSquaD moniker, Aaron Holstein has found the perfect balance between his duties as a highly sought-after EDM producer and those of being a father. Based in Denver, Holstein creates music that straddles several genres, blurring the lines between breakbeats and bass without straying far from his hip-hop roots.

Come Together! Using Songwriting to Change Music Education and Industry

Room: Cache La Poudre - Doubletree Hotel
Participants will get a hands on song-creation experience similar to what Little Kids Rock students do in their classrooms. No prior musical or songwriting experience is required. Afterwards, we will have a discussion about how these concepts are changing music education and industry across Colorado through the Take Note initiative.

Dr. Bryce Merrill is Music Programs Manager at Bohemian Foundation in Northern Colorado and co-founder of Range Music Ecosystems. Bryce is an expert on public sector support of music and has helped public and private entities build sustainable and equitable music ecosystems.

Mary Claxton is the Colorado Director for Little Kids Rock, working to expand access to culturally responsive and student centered music education across the state. She also acts as an educational consultant for the governor’s Take Note initiative. Mary is also a drummer and singer and performs across Colorado with The Burroughs.

What Does a Farm Park Have to Do With Art? A Case Study of Arts for Social Change

Room: Room 101 - Recreation Center
The Rio Grande Farm Park is in the process of commissioning sculptural seating places through an Arts in Society grant that seeks to support artistic projects at the intersection of civic engagement and social change. Aesthetic Perspectives, an evaluative framework developed by Animating Democracy, is being utilized in the jurying process. Data collected will be utilized in a research project with the all grantees to evaluate how the arts contribute Marlena Antonucci is the Community Engagement Coordinator for the Rio Grande Farm Park in Alamosa, Colorado, an innovative and multi-use park that fosters an equitable local food system. She earned her M.A. in Art History focusing on the role of soils in public art and how brownfields sites in particular might be reimagined by contemporary artists as meaningful places.

Julie Mordecai leads Rio Grande Farm Park and owned the Complete Non-Profit. She was the ED of the Colorado Alliance of BG Clubs and the BGC of the San Luis Valley for a decade. Julie is the chairman of the Denver Film Society and past founder of the Alamosa Live Music Association.

The Urban Rural Flow

Room: Hensel Phelps Theater - Union Colony Civic Center

Perhaps the most striking revelation from the 2016 election was the degree to which urban and rural populations have become estranged from one another. This is not only unhealthy for a functioning democracy but is also based upon a faulty understanding of our existing interdependence. This panel discussion highlights rural/urban cross-sector cultural collaborations that are designed to illuminate and amplify the ways in which we are connected and to develop models that expand and strengthen those connections. This exchange of value and values emphasizes a regional framework called “Cultureshed” powered by a continuous rural/urban flow.

Jay Salinas is an artist, farmer and educator. In 1995, together with his partner Donna Neuwirth, they started, a CSA based in Wisconsin. In 2000 they formed the Wormfarm Institute, an award-winning nonprofit whose mission is to integrate culture and agriculture.

Susie Kaldis Lowe has worked with the North Fork Valley Creative Coalition (NFVCC) for seven years. She was the founding Executive Director (2012-2014) and now serves as the Board President. The NFVCC manages the Paonia Creative District and Space to Create Paonia. Susie has a Bachelors Degree in Fine Art media from the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, CA.

For more than 15 years, Jamie Licko has been shaping the evolution of cities, neighborhoods and districts, as they face change, challenge and growth. Jamie's consulting company Centro Inc. has provided service to clients in more than 50 cities in 15 states across North America, as well as in the United Kingdom and Singapore. Recently, Licko has been leading efforts in the RiNo Art District as it faces unprecedented development pressure.

Martha Weidmann serves as NINE dot ARTS’ CEO where she leads the firm in business development, strategic planning and financial forecasting. She is a guiding force in shaping the company’s unique approach to art advising and, together with her partner, Molly Casey, has helped to set the standard in how businesses and artists connect.
Building Partnerships Between CU-Boulder and Creative Districts: The Colorado Metrolab Program

Room: UNC Bears Room - Doubletree Hotel

The University of Colorado Boulder and other universities and colleges in Colorado have a wealth of knowledge to offer creative districts and small cities. Colorado Metrolab is an effort to establish city-university partnerships to focus design, business, and other analytical and creative services on the priorities of creative districts and small cities. In this session, faculty from the University of Colorado along with current local government partners will talk about the experience of Metrolab and the opportunities to extend this model to other creative districts and small cities.

Brian Muller is an Associate Professor at the University of Colorado Boulder. His research focuses on urban planning, design and community engagement. Muller directs CU-Boulder’s Community Engagement Design and Research Center (CEDaR).

Matt Chasansky is the Manager of the City of Boulder Office of Arts & Cultural Services, where he coordinates the city’s activities in public art, creative economy initiatives, programming and cultural policy. Previously, Matt was Director of the Art and Culture Program at Denver International Airport where he managed the collection of public art, a performance series and temporary exhibitions.

From Disorder to Dancer

Room: Room 101 - Recreation Center

Hear the story of how a poet with Parkinson’s Disease (PD) and his dancer niece started a dance class for people with and without PD. They soon discovered it offered so much more than physical benefits, including: mindfulness in the body, potential for creative expression and deep connections within the community. Seven years later the tiny “Reconnect with your Body” class has become a thriving, multi-faceted program of the Broomfield-based Art as Action and has transformed the multi-disciplinary performance collective into a fully integrated company that changes people lives. Session will include poetry, video and the opportunity to DANCE.

Sarah Leversee is founder and Artistic Director Art as Action. A life-long dancer, Sarah teaches Reconnect with your Body, dance for people with and without Parkinson’s, a program of Art as Action. She trained with Dance for PD® founding teacher David Leventhal and was awarded a Stanley J. Wertheimer Fellowship.

Wayne Gilbert is a retired teacher, full-time poet/actor/dancer. In 2005, Wayne was diagnosed with Parkinson’s Disease. He is a co-founder of Reconnect with Your Body, and long-time Artivist with Art as Action. Wayne is a member and co-founder of Us-in-a-Box Theatre Workshop, a group of actor-writers who create and produce original performance pieces.
ABOUT THE ARTIST

Wes Sam-Bruce lives as an artist in many capacities. He is best known for his audacious large-scale, exploratory world-within-a-world-like installations that full of imagery and content that is both chaotic and centering; inviting you to explore the artwork with your full body and self. He is deeply curious about how human beings find and make meaning, the way we interact with each other, and our connections with the non-human world.

2018 RECIPIENTS

Connecting with Creatives : A Conversation on Supporting Creativity
Room: UNC Bears Room - Doubletree Hotel
Creative districts aim to nurture creativity and build creative networks within communities to drive growth in local economies. But many of the creatives at the core of these efforts feel disconnected from their local districts. Some do not understand the objective of the district, others do not feel included or supported. This session brings together insights from interviews, network theory, and the experiences of district and arts council administrators to discuss how we can better serve the creatives to strengthen our creative communities.
Art Wars: The Mural Awakens

“A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away (aka Greeley)... the Rebellion (aka Weld County Tobacco Control Program) planned a marketing scheme with young people unlike anything undertaken before... an extensive mural project. From inception to completion, the project would take over 3 years. The band of rebels moved forward with an ambitious proposal as Empire forces loomed. Little did they know they would face many challenges on their quest to employ innovation in prevention which will impact generations to come…”

On this journey, get a behind-the-scenes look at the process for completing a novel health marketing campaign.
