Welcome to Tim Wolfe, the new CTO Director.

October 2021 Care for Colorado Monthly Messaging
Pack It In, Pack It Out

“I am excited to work with the Care for Colorado Coalition and continue the focus on responsible travel through the ‘Care for Colorado’ stewardship program. Thanks to founding partner Leave No Trace Center for Outdoor Ethics and the entire Coalition for your efforts in educating visitors and residents on how to responsibly enjoy Colorado's wonderful outdoor resources and protect what makes Colorado so special.”

As you all know, this is prime hunting season, so we have provided additional messaging for this activity. Did you know that, according to the Colorado Wildlife Council, hunters and anglers are an essential part of Colorado's economy, providing more than $3.25 billion to Colorado every year? Plus, they impact all 64 counties and support more than 21,000 jobs. License fees support careers in conservation and allow Colorado's conservation programs to operate without reliance on tax funding.

We know that sports-women and -men of all types are out in great numbers this fall, enjoying Colorado's outdoor resources. We hope the messaging below will help you remind everyone to have fun, stay safe, Care for Colorado and Leave No Trace.

Yours in stewardship,

Tim Wolfe
Director
Colorado Tourism Office

#CareForColorado Social Media Posts & Infographics

Share any of the posts below to encourage visitors to Care for Colorado on all their adventures. Don’t forget to tag @VisitColorado and @LeaveNoTraceCenter on all your posts.

- Care for Colorado Social Media Infographics
- Closures of areas can change quickly, and your hunting destination or access route may be affected. Prior to license purchase, scouting or hunting, learn about fires, closure alerts and plan alternative routes and areas to hunt. Check with local land management agencies, Forest Service, BLM, etc., before heading out. #CareForColorado #LeaveNoTrace

- Be aware of the “field of fire.” Do not shoot near developed areas, trails, campsites or roads. #CareforColorado #LeaveNoTrace

- Pack it in, pack it out. Pack out all trash, including leftover food, spent brass and shotgun shells. #CareForColorado #LeaveNoTrace

- Be prepared when nature calls. If you have to poop, walk at least 70 steps from trails, water and camp. Dig a cat hole 6-8 inches deep, go in the hole, cover it and pack out your TP. Or, use a wag bag — a disposable bag found in most outdoor stores — so you can pack out your waste. #CareForColorado #LeaveNoTrace

- Before you head out on your adventure, check local fire restrictions to make sure campfires are allowed. #CareForColorado #LeaveNoTrace

- If campfires are allowed, use existing fire rings or fire pans to build a campfire. When you’re done with your fire, be sure that all wood is burned completely to ash and is cool to the touch before you leave the area. #CareForColorado #LeaveNoTrace

- Be bear aware. When bears get access to human food, they can become dangerous and even be put down. Always store food, beverages, toiletries and other scented items in bear-proof containers to prevent unwanted visitors and to keep you and the bears safe. #CareForColorado #LeaveNoTrace

Care for Colorado Additional Resources

New Look for CTO Industry Partners Site
When you now access Care for Colorado assets/content through the Industry Partners link on COLORADO.com, this site is now integrated into the Colorado Office of Economic & International Trade (OEDIT) website. The Care for Colorado assets/content can still be easily accessed through Tourism Trainings and Toolkits from the left-hand navigation bar.

Colorado Concierge

Don’t forget about the new Colorado Concierge Hunting & Fishing Module, sponsored by Colorado Parks and Wildlife. You and your employees can take this module as part of the Colorado Concierge online training to learn about the history of hunting and fishing, the important part it plays in conservation and the resources/information available for visitors and residents through CPW.

Generation Wild Trash Monsters

Thanks to Stewardship Partner GOCO for developing the new Generation Wild Trash Monsters to help kids learn to “Trash the Trash.”
